

ABOUT US

In 1912, grandfather George Kamburis sailed the Atlantic ocean from Patmos, Greece to come to America. As the story goes, he landed without much money & made his way down to Montgomery, Alabama. Knowing very little English, he started off pushing an ice cream cart through the streets of Montgomery. He saved enough to buy a fruit stand. Once that was established, he again saved enough to open a cafe & named it "The Coffee Pot." Unfortunately, after a few years in operation, the Coffee Pot burned down, along with many other buildings in the area, so George had to start all over. He partnered with his brother Antonio, & this time around they decided on a larger restaurant. They renovated a big garage type building on Lee St. & named it "The Normandy Cafe." They went on to prosper well in that location.

The brothers were so close that once both men became much older, they landed in different hospitals at the same time, both unknowing of the other's condition or whereabouts. One day in the hospital, Pappa George told his son-in-law, Robert Griggs, that he had a bad dream about his brother dying. Unfortunately, George's dream was true, Antonio died that day. The next day following, Pappa George died as well.

Two generations later, the Kamburis brothers carry on their family's tradition (including their parallel start in the coffee shop business as original founders of the iconic Flipnotics) with the creation of Satellite Bistro and Bar in 2006. It's modern space (with a nod to the past), innovative menu and local vibe keep the spirit of their ancestors and passion of their Greek heritage alive for people to come together & enjoy... OPA!
